Challenges await tournament selection committees

Men's group works to deal fairly with 'bubble' teams

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

On March 13, the usual nine-member Division I Men's Basketball Committee will become a committee of millions.

On that day, throngs of people anxiously will await — with an empty bracket sheet and writing instrument at hand — the announcement from Kansas City, Missouri, of the 1994 Division I Men's Basketball Championship field.

Many will praise the committee for selecting a team from their area. Others will find it unbelievable that the committee could overlook their favorite squad. Others still will won-

Women's committee focuses on expanded field

THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

The expansion of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship from 48 to 64 teams presents a major logistical challenge for members of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee and the national office championships staff.

The addition of 16 teams has changed the overall make-up of the tournament in more ways than just mere numbers.

Because of the elimination of first-round byes in the championship, the number of first-round games doubles this year from 16 to 32.

Because of that, sites of second-round

Academic-enhancement fund expected to go up

The money provided to each Division I institution by the academic-enhancement fund of the NCAA revenue-distribution plan will be increased by 33 percent if a recommendation by the NCAA Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues is approved.

The committee, which met March 1 in Chicago, proposed to the NCAA Executive Committee that each Division I member institution should receive $40,000 from the 1995 fund. In 1991 and 1992, the first two years of the revenue-distribution plan, the amount was $25,000. In 1993, it was increased to $30,000, where it remains.

In recommending the increase, the committee is following through on its belief that the academic-enhancement fund needs to be a significant part of the overall plan. The fund is designed to aid academic-support programs for student-athletes at Division I institutions by making it possible for the institution to acquire adequate equipment, supplies and personnel for that purpose.

Financial-aid survey form is approved by committee

A survey form seeking information for use in the development of tuition-and-fees, need-based financial aid models has been approved by the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism and sent to financial aid directors at selected Divisions I and II institutions.

The survey form, approved by the committee at its February 28-March 1 meeting in Amelia Island, Florida, asks recipients to provide financial aid profiles of 50 randomly selected student-athletes at each institution. The forms were sent to 39 Division I and 25 Division II institutions that previously agreed to participate in the survey.

The student-athletes will represent all teams sponsored by an institution. The schools have been asked to return the completed survey forms by May 1.

Crunch time

The NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships team title was decided when Steve Farr (top) of Ithaca College defeated Jon Dawley of Wartburg College in the 190-pound class. Farr's victory enabled Ithaca to escape with a 77½-75 team victory over Wartburg. Ithaca, which won its third team title overall and first since 1990, also had finalists in two other weight classes. BCA concerns

NCAA, BCA officials conduct first meeting

The NCAA and the Black Coaches Association conducted their first mediation session March 1.

The Community Relations Service, which is the mediator, said no comment will be provided during the talks.

The mediation is in response to the controversy resulting from the defeat of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 42. That proposal would have increased the number of permissible grants-in-aid for Division I men's basketball programs from 13 to 14.

For more detail, see page 1 and the January 26 and January 19 issues of The NCAA News.

Revenues

Revenue-distribution panel seeks more for academic fund

The NCAA Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues recommended at its March 1 meeting that each Division I member institution should receive $40,000 from the academic-enhancement fund of the 1995 revenue-distribution plan. If the NCAA Executive Committee approves the increase, that would be a $10,000 per institution growth over the current allotment.

The committee also addressed how the special-assistance fund is being used and discussed how Division I conference realignment could affect the plan.

Division I-A football

Student-athletes to discuss playoff with research group

The research group that is collecting information about a Division I-A football playoff will hear from student-athletes when it conducts its next meeting March 20 in Dallas.

The players probably will represent teams that appeared in the most recent New Year's Day bowls.

At its last meeting February 21-22 in Kansas City, Missouri, University of California, Los Angeles, Chancellor Charles E. Young said that revenue potential for the event appears to be high. The group also met February

Certification

Peer-selection subcommittee to assign first review teams

The peer-selection subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification met March 8-9 to assign review teams to the 24 schools scheduled for fall 1994 visits.

At its February 18 meeting, the certification committee focused on training peer reviewers. The committee has approved five sites at which to train those who will be serving as the first peer reviewers for the program. Three sessions will be conducted in conjunction with NCAA regional seminars in May and June in San Francisco; Washington, D.C., and New Orleans, while the other two will be at the summer meetings of the Big Ten and Southwest/Southland Conferences.

Training for peer-review team chairs likely will be done by teleconference.

Next meeting: May 11 in San Francisco.

Regional seminars

NCAA regional seminars scheduled for May, June

The NCAA membership services group will conduct three regional seminars in late May and early June in an effort to provide a continuing-education forum for Divisions I and II institutional and athletics administrators.

The seminars will provide information about NCAA legislation and interpretations and will address the roles of various campus constituents in establishing and maintaining institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs.

The 1994 seminars will be conducted May 11-13 in San Francisco; May 25-27 in Arlington, Virginia, and June 1-3 in New Orleans.

Information will be furnished to participants about the most common eligibility problems and rules violations that occur in athletics programs (and the procedures for resolving those problems).

There is no registration fee.

Briefly in the News

Senior night bittersweet

Almost regardless of the circumstances, most student-athletes during their senior year treasure the last game played in the home stadium or arena. For University of Tampa men's basketball player DeCarlo Deveaux, Senior Night was a bittersweet one.

Barely 72 hours after learning that his older brother, Drexel, had been shot to death, Deveaux pulled on his No. 32 jersey — the same number his brother wore at Tampa from 1987 to 1991 — for the last time at home and took to the floor.

"No disrespect meant to him," Deveaux told the Tampa Tribune about why he played in the team's February 25 home finale against Eckerd College. "Deep down in my heart, I know he would want me to play. I know that. And from now on, I'm number 32. That's the only thing I can do to honor him right now."

Deveaux would have made Drexel extremely proud. He scored 31 points in the game, helping lead Tampa to victory. Deveaux's mother, Sandra Gow, traveled from her home in Freeport, Bahamas, to watch her son play in his last home game. She said the game provided her a brief escape from grieving.

"I was able to forget my sorrow for a few minutes and get into the game and pull for Tampa," Gow said. "I think he played very well under the circumstances. His brother was a driving force, an example he always wanted to follow."

Community leaders

Community-service coordinators of Southeastern Conference institutions met recently to examine all aspects of the involvement of student-athletes and athletics department personnel in community-service and outreach programs. The meeting, which was sponsored by the conference, was February 10 and 11.

"Community service is an excellent way for universities to contribute to their surrounding communities while providing hands-on practical educational experiences for students," said John Gerdy, associate commissioner of the Southeastern Conference. "This is an area where our highly visible athletics departments are uniquely qualified to contribute to the overall mission of the university."

More than 139 children in seven elementary schools, as well as 40 Middle Tennessee State student-athletes, participated in the program last summer. In 30 days, the children read a total of 76,000 pages. Clark received the grand prize for reading more than 6,000 pages.

Aztecs: 'Coke is it!'

San Diego State University student-athletes might want to begin memorizing the slogan "Coke is it!" After reaching a 12-year, $2.4 million sponsorship agreement with the soft-drink manufacturer, Aztec student-athletes will be seeing plenty of the cola giant's famous red and white logo around campus.

The agreement increases the value of San Diego State's relationship with Coca-Cola from $10,000 to $200,000 annually. Previously, Coca-Cola's primary involvement with the institution was an advertisement on the scoreboard at the school's baseball stadium.

Now, Coca-Cola will become the title sponsor of the Aztec football program; receive sponsorship recognition in all San Diego State media guides, game programs, print ads, electronic-media commercials, and stadium and scoreboard signage; place commercial spots in San Diego State regional broadcasts, and receive recognition on game tickets, advertising in university alumni publications and booklists, and recognition on all schedule posters.

In addition, Coca-Cola receives exclusivity for its beverages on the San Diego State campus — from vending machines to dormitories to catering services.

"We are very happy to have Coca-Cola as a sponsor," said Jim Herrick, associate athletics director and executive director of the Aztec Athletic Foundation. "It is a nice partnership."

News quiz

Answers to the following questions appeared in February issues of The NCAA News. How many can you answer?

1. True or false: The California Supreme Court has upheld the legality of the NCAA's drug-testing program.

2. True or false: As of December 1993, men's gymnastics was sponsored by four fewer institutions than will be required to continue the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships after 1995.

3. True or false: All men's ice hockey players wear helmets approved by the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE).

4. The number of women participating in varsity sports at NCAA institutions grew by what percentage in 1992-93? (a) 2.05; (b) 3.52; (c) 5.35; (d) 5.40.

5. True or false: The number of participants in men's varsity sports at NCAA institutions decreased in 1992-93.

6. How many times did University of Oklahoma football teams coached by Bud Wilkinson finish as the No. 1-ranked team in the nation? (a) one; (b) two; (c) three; (d) four.

7. How many Florida A&M University football teams coached by Alonzo "Jake" Gaiter won black college national championships? (a) four; (b) five; (c) six; (d) seven.

8. True or false: The NCAA Youth Education through Sports (YES) Program was launched in 1985.

Fact file

More NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship games have been played in North Carolina than any other state. Since 1951, 146 tournament games have been played in the state. Three more games will be played there this year as the Final Four is staged in Charlotte, which previously has been the site of 56 tournament games.

Nominations to fill committee vacancies due March 23

Vacancies on the NCAA Men's and Women's Committee on Committees and Nominating Committee will be filled by the NCAA Council during its April meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Member institutions are invited to submit written nominations for these vacancies, which must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, no later than March 23, 1994.

Legislation adopted at the 1994 NCAA Convention provides that both the membership of the Men's Committee on Committees and the Women's Committee on Committees shall include at least three ethnic minorities, with at least one from each division. These requirements will be met by attrition, in accordance with the policy that no current member will serve less time than would have been possible had the legislation not been adopted. When vacancies occur, the appropriate appointments will be made so that the committees conform to the new bylaw requirements.

In addition, new legislation also has been adopted that will alter the structure of the Nominating Committee. Those new requirements also will be met by attrition.

Following is a list of committee members whose terms expire, including those eligible and not eligible for reelection. Committee members' divisions, districts or regions, where applicable, are in parentheses.

Men's Committee on Committees: Three-year term with no immediate reelection. Four expirations.

Not eligible for reelection: Robert T. Becker, Saginaw Valley State University (Division II-District 4); Marino H. Casem, Southern University, Baton Rouge (I-6); Prentice Gault, Big Eight Conference, chair (I-5); Chester S. Gladchuk, Boston College (I 1). Two of those elected must be from Division I, one of whom must be an ethnic minority. One must be an ethnic minority from Division II. One must be from District 4, one from District 6.

The new chair must be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms: Daniel L. Bridges, California Institute of Technology (III-at large-8); Gary A. Cunningham, California State University, Fresno (I-7); Timothy J. Dillon, University of Alaska Anchorage (I-8); Susan Petersen-Lubow, U.S. Merchant Marine Academy (III-2).

Women's Committee on Committees: Three-year term with no immediate reelection. Four expirations.

Not eligible for reelection: Carol M. Dunn, California State University, Los Angeles (II-8); Andrea Myers, Indiana State University (I-5); Katherine E. Noble, University of Montana (I-7); Laurie Priest, Mount Holyoke College, chair (III-1).

Two of those elected must be from Division I, one an ethnic minority from Division II and one an ethnic minority from Division III. One each from Districts 1, 5 and 8.

The new chair must be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms: Bernadette V. McGlade, Georgia Institute of Technology (I-3); Margaret Harbison, East Texas State University (II-6); Diane Milutinovich, California State University, Fresno (I-at large); Sandy Tillman, Emory University (III-at large).

Nominating Committee: One-year terms; limit of two years in a five-year period. Sixteen members. Four members must be Council members whose terms do not expire in January 1995 (two from Division I and one each from Divisions II and III). At least five men and five women. At least one ethnic minority each from Divisions I, II and III. Eight of the committee members must be former NCAA officers or former members of the Council, four from Division I and two each from Divisions II and III. Four shall be Council members whose terms do not expire that year, two from Division I and one each from Divisions II and III. Chair must be selected from among the four Council representatives.

Requirements for each division follow, as well as a list of members and their eligibility status.

■ Division I: Eight members, including at least one ethnic minority and two women. Two from each of the Division I Council representation regions. Two members of the NCAA Council whose terms do not expire in January 1995. Four former NCAA officers or former members of the Council.

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw

Wheelchair sports deserve fair play

By Oliver Ford, Mark Goodenow and Lew Shaver
SOUTHWEST STATE UNIVERSITY

While colleges and universities are trying to fulfill the requirements of Title IX with regard to sports opportunities for women, they should not overlook the equally legitimate claims of wheelchair athletes under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

It makes little sense to reconfigure athletics programs to comply with Title IX without addressing ADA requirements at the same time because the legal obligations already are in effect for both. Whether women athletes and wheelchair athletes should be funded from the always-stretched athletics budget no longer is open to question. The law has included both groups now, not when funding for established sports will not be diminished or even after the requirements for funding women's programs have been fulfilled. The requirements are clear: fund both now.

For most colleges and universities, addressing these requirements will mean rethinking their approach and perhaps attitude toward meeting the needs of wheelchair athletes. Virtually no wheelchair sports are included in university or college athletics departments. Most wheelchair sports are part of a rehabilitation program or of a special-services program for the physically disabled.

The first step for these institutions is to move wheelchair athletics into the athletics department where they belong. Some people may protest that wheelchair sports are not really athletic and do not belong in the athletics department. The most appropriate response to this objection may be to challenge the protesters to try a game of wheelchair basketball, a downhill run on one ski, or perhaps a marathon in a wheelchair, and let them learn from experience.

It also is time that wheelchair sports were recognized and supported by the collegiate athletics associations. Despite the fact that there is organized international competition in many of these sports, neither the NCAA nor the NAIA officially recognizes and includes these sports, ostensibly because not enough institutions field teams in them.

This is no justification for continuing to discriminate against sports played in wheelchairs or against the athletes who play them. If only a few institutions field teams in these sports, few resources will be needed and the association's cost will be minimal.

Clearinghouse needs information flow

B. J. Skelton was right to try to "set the record straight" about the new NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse in his January 26 editorial in The NCAA News.

As someone who works at the institutional level with the clearinghouse every day, I know first-hand about the existing confusion. I am grateful that Mr. Skelton tried to erase some of the misinformation about the clearinghouse, and I hope he and the other members of the Special Committee to Oversee Implementation of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse continue this help until the confusion subsides.

For now, the frustration level is rising on our campus as coaches, academic counselors and compliance-office staffers try to work our prospects through this new system. Please, any help is much appreciated.

The clearinghouse is a great idea that will save time and resources at both the collegiate and high-school levels. However, those benefits are still at least a year away. Before any savings are reaped at either level, we all will have to go through much more than simple "growing pains." Trying to get all of our incoming students certified as eligible by the time school starts this fall will be a challenge; getting early visits approved in the fall will be a miracle.

The largest problem simply is making sure that the high-school seniors know that they have to go through the clearinghouse to be eligible to play this fall. Mr. Skelton notes that clearinghouse information was mailed to more than 26,000 high schools last year; however, that has not translated into knowledgeable high-school counselors or students.

In January of this year, we received a phone call from the parent of a high-school senior who definitely would play Division I or II ice hockey. The parent said that his son, with more than half of his senior year completed, just heard about the clearinghouse within the last week, even after being recruited by more than a dozen institutions.

Altogether, of the more than 100 high-school seniors that our institution is currently tracking in the clearinghouse, only 68 percent have sent in their student release forms. Our coaches and staff obviously need to take on a larger role in increasing this percentage, but the fact still stands that the clearinghouse information has not gotten to the students who most need that information.

However, getting the information to the students and getting them to send in a student release form is only part of the battle. High-school counselors must send in transcripts and 48-H forms. If there is a problem with either, the counselor must send in more records. Students and/or parents must see that test scores are sent directly to the clearinghouse from the testing agency. (Do not forget that this probably will cost another $8.)

While these forms always have been required, they always were required by the institution, not the clearinghouse. Counselors want to know why we, the institution, cannot call the clearinghouse and have them change a 48-H form if we know it is wrong, and parents do not understand why they must send the test score to the clearinghouse when it already was sent to the institution.

The questions keep coming as the high-school counselors, coaches, principals, students and parents learn about this system one athlete at a time — each question taking more and more time away from our deadline to gain final certification for all of our new student-athletes this fall.

At our institution, we redoubled our efforts to get our prospects certified as eligible by August 1, 1994. We sent out the needed forms directly to the student and his or her parents, we created an outline of tasks for the counselors to follow for each prospect, and we work with the parents as they call and ask for help. Still, we are a long way from getting all of our signed prospects certified as eligible to play this fall. Currently, less than 10 percent of the athletes we have signed are preliminarily eligible.

In sum, we need more help in setting the record straight about the clearinghouse before the clearinghouse sets a record for the most ineligible first-year student-athletes.

Clearinghouse needed for all?

I must agree with Brad Tufts' letter in the February 16 NCAA News regarding the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse. I am not opposed to the idea but have to wonder if it is for everyone.

Many colleges and universities in Divisions I and II have admission standards stricter than the NCAA's minimum requirements for initial eligibility. I agree with Brad that it seems almost ludicrous to ask a prospective student-athlete with an SAT of 1200 and a high-school grade-point average of 3.500 in core courses to verify his or her eligibility.

Could there not be some exceptions to those who are required to go through the clearinghouse process? We already have experienced the rather embarrassing situation of asking one of our top academic scholarship winners, who also is a prospective student-athlete, to send his information to the clearinghouse to see if he meets initial-eligibility standards.

I suggest that some thought be given to developing a waiver process, or exemption status, for next year. I am in no way suggesting that the clearinghouse be done away with, but rather that some type of minimum standard be set up for those prospective student-athletes who must go through this process.

It occurs to me that at a time when we are trying to project professionalism in the field of collegiate athletics that a picture of a woman knitting during the NCAA Convention is completely inappropriate. While there is absolutely nothing wrong with knitting, I hardly think the cameraman would zero in on a male coach or administrator reading the sports section during a Convention session.

I am always informed and enlightened by The NCAA News and would prefer to think this was an error in thought rather than a derogatory aside about women in athletics.

Emerging women's sports broaden menu of possibilities

Chris Voelz, women's athletics director
University of Minnesota, Twin Cities
The Chronicle of Higher Education
About emerging sports for women:

"We wanted to give encouragement and ideas. We didn't want anyone to have an excuse for not adding sports. We wanted people to think creatively and not feel that there was a finite menu from which to choose their varsity teams. Gender equity is not just adding softball because there is a baseball team."

"We know that there may be a problem nationally with girls and women having enough chances to do what they want compared to the guys. But it's hard to see those problems or even understand them when you're already sitting here taking advantage of opportunities."

Lisa Fernandez, softball student-athlete
University of California, Los Angeles
The Chronicle of Higher Education

"Ever since we were growing up, we were taught to be happy with what we got because we were lucky as girls to get anything at all compared to the generation before us. But then we hear about cutbacks in the men's program and the struggle for equality, and we step back and see what is out there and that it really is time for women to get their share...."

"The difference between the men's and women's teams is that we have to work harder to earn respect. But we have certainly earned it, and many of the other teams have, too."

Softball basking in the glow of popularity surge

By Jasmine Hightower
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Even though Olympic competition for 1994 has come to a close, softball fans haven't lost any of the Olympic spirit.

Since the June 1991 International Olympic Committee announcement that softball will be a medal sport beginning in 1996, interest in the sport has reached an all-time high.

That interest is having a positive impact on NCAA softball competition.

In 1991, 1,881 fans attended the Women's College World Series championship game. Following the news of softball's Olympic status, the 1992 championship game drew 2,501 fans. As the 1996 Games get closer, softball's popularity continues to grow; the 1993 championship game drew a record 3,138 spectators.

Multiple factors

But while the Olympic movement certainly has helped softball grow, there are other factors to remember, said Jay Miller, a member of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee and head coach at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

"I think the Olympics are part of it," he said. "That and the whole gender-equity movement tied together are factors. They all work together to bring softball to the forefront."

Until recently, the sport labored to achieve more than just a small share of attention in athletics.

Miller pointed to a lack of marketing, promotions and facilities as contributors to the problem.

"Our sport hasn't been very well marketed in the past. We were not in the best facilities. It was hard to get people to come out," he said.

But with softball's official recognition by the Olympic movement, teams now are having much more success attracting fans.

"Our attendance has been rising," Miller noted. "The Olympics will increase that. Whether the Olympic team wins or loses, it will only increase the visibility of the sport."

U.S. finish is key

Cindy Bristow, director of national teams and coaching development at the Amateur Softball Association USA, agreed that the U.S. team can give the sport a larger stage. However, she cautioned that the team's finish may affect how fast the sport grows.

"It depends on how we do," she said. "If we win the gold medal, we'll be on television. There could be a bigger explosion (in the sport's popularity). If things don't work out, interest may taper off. With the commitment we have made—time-wise, financially and athletically—we should do well."

At least some of the fruits of that commitment will be on display even before the Olympics.

Miller said, "There will be more softball on television in the years leading up to the Olympics. There will be more collegiate softball on television leading up to the Olympics. The fight to get more coverage has been a slow, evolutionary process."

Introducing the stars

Part of the process has been getting viewers hooked on the stars of the game.

Just as Major League Baseball's fans may be drawn to the game by the play of a Barry Bonds, softball may reach fans with an athlete like University of California, Los Angeles, standout Lisa Fernandez, who can pitch, hit and field.

Bristow recognizes the benefits that resulted from having marquee players like Fernandez in last year's televised NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship.

"We had a personality," she said. "People knew about Lisa Fernandez because they saw her on television. They came out to see her."

"We have other athletes of her caliber. Our job is to turn them into personalities."

Miller agreed. "The stars are there. The more recognition they receive, the better it is for the sport in general. The recognition they are receiving will help players in the future."

Players for the 1996 Olympic team have not been chosen yet. Prospective players are in a continual process of trying out at various camps and events, which are scheduled through September 1995. Stops along the path to Olympic glory include the U.S. Olympic Festival, which will be held in St. Louis, and the world championships in Canada.

Challenge to collegians

The competition for spots on the team roster will be intense. Although Bristow said the national-team selection committee wants to give as many athletes as much experience as possible, the process may present a challenge for collegiate athletes.

"We hold world championships every four years," Bristow said. "Thirty-one nations will participate this summer. No matter how well they have played in college, (players) never have played Croatia before in world championships. It's a lot more than they are used to."

"There are a lot of older players excelling in the game because of their hand/eye coordination and experience. The older athletes outperformed the college athletes initially because the younger players were intimidated. They were in awe of the older players. Next time will be different."

"How long the Debbie Dooms (a pitcher at UCLA from 1982 to 1985) hang on, I don't know, but we tend to have older athletes excelling in international competition."

To help the team excel, eight finalists have been selected for coaching duties. Bristow said the seven-member national-team selection committee plans to name the coaching staff by this fall.

Wheelchair

Americans with Disabilities Act requirements need to be addressed

These sports already are organized at minimal expense outside the associations; what they lack is recognition. On the other hand, if the NCAA and the NAIA continue to exclude wheelchair athletics from recognition, even fewer institutions will be encouraged to field teams, and opportunities for wheelchair athletes will continue to exist only outside the recognized structures of intercollegiate athletics.

A cautionary note should be found in the history of the treatment of women's athletics by colleges and universities. Women's sports have been discriminated against for many years, often forced to compete with unequal funding and under special conditions and rules that reduced competition and diminished the development of strength and skills.

Since the passage of the Title IX legislation, women have turned to the courts for equal protection under the law. Until the NCAA and NAIA recognize and encourage wheelchair athletics, those sports likely will continue to be underfunded or even unavailable to many collegiate athletes outside metropolitan areas — until wheelchair athletes are forced to turn to the legal system under the ADA. If equal status and recognition by both institutions and the associations occur as they should, however, wheelchair athletes will not have to use the law courts to establish their claims.

It is probable that official recognition and support would lead to a much more inclusive conference structure also, one that would stimulate new interest and participation in wheelchair athletics, develop sufficient external support to meet appropriate needs, and avoid unnecessary expenses.

If institutions and associations make it necessary for wheelchair athletes to seek redress in court, like women athletes in recent years, the resulting decisions are almost certain to be much more expensive, far less satisfactory, and very far-reaching. The law is already established, so what justification is there for continuing to delay recognition and to deny inclusion?

Some may object that institutions already are pressed to maintain their existing programs and meet the requirements of Title IX, so why should they undertake to meet yet another claim on limited resources? It also may be argued that popular but expensive programs such as football, which generate revenue for some institutions, may have fewer resources available to them if funds are diverted to achieve equity for wheelchair athletes.

This is true, but no more so than for meeting institutional obligations for woman athletes under Title IX.

What is equally true is that the courts are not sympathetic to those arguments.

The courts have ordered repeatedly that sports for women must be funded on the same basis as sports for men. Similar rulings are likely for wheelchair athletes under the ADA.

It seems far more reasonable, and fair, for institutions simply to recognize and support wheelchair athletics in appropriate ways now. It is likely, even probable, that wheelchair athletes at such institutions will be sufficiently encouraged by affirmative efforts by the institution that they will join in building support for their sports and avoid litigation altogether. After all, wheelchair athletes are used to overcoming obstacles; they typically overcome more obstacles in a day than most able athletes face in a year, and they do not quit.

Team-only format in II tennis gains momentum

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

By definition, tennis is an individual sport.

But that no longer may be true in Division II—at least with regard to men's and women's tennis championships.

In May 1993, the Division II men's and women's subcommittees of the NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee proposed to the NCAA Executive Committee that individual competition be dropped from future championships in favor of a team-only event.

"Team tennis has become so dominant with what we do in college tennis, at least in the spring, that the emphasis is on the team. We feel the championships should reflect that," said John A. Bryant, men's tennis coach at Southwest Baptist University and chair of the Division II men's subcommittee.

The proposal certainly does that. In addition to eliminating the individual championships, the subcommittees recommend increasing the men's and women's fields from eight to 16 teams, designating common dates and a site for both championships, implementing regional-qualifying tournaments and adopting a "3-6" scoring system. The changes, if approved, would be effective with the 1995 championships.

Supported by survey

The subcommittees decided to forward the proposals to the Executive Committee after surveying Division II coaches and athletics directors. Of 220 surveys returned, more than 70 percent favored the team-only concept.

"We've been trying to make this go for three or four years," said Bryant. "We've never had enough people. There were always traditionalists who wanted to keep singles and doubles as part of the national championships. As time went on and we actually looked at

Regional qualifying overwhelmingly supported in I

Seventy-five percent of Division I women's tennis coaches and administrators favor a championships format that includes regional qualifying, according to results of a survey conducted by the Division I women's subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee.

The subcommittee recently surveyed head coaches, senior women administrators and conference administrators on whether they favor altering the current championships format to include regional qualifying. Presently, the championships field consists of the nation's top 20 teams as selected by the Division I subcommittee.

Under a regional-qualifying format, a predetermined number of teams in each of the six Division I women's tennis regions would compete to advance to the national championships. Division I men's tennis is the only championships currently using regional qualifying.

'A lot of debate'

"There's been a lot of debate on the issue," said Elizabeth Murphey, senior associate athletics director at the University of Georgia and chair of the Division I women's tennis subcommittee. "It has been discussed at our championships and annual meeting. Our women's group works to be thorough in making decisions. The survey gives us another dimension in deciding what is best and fair for Division I women's tennis. We will evaluate thoroughly the results and the impact of the first year of regional qualifying in the Division I men's championship."

Murphey says the subcommittee hopes to make a decision on regional qualifying at the NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee meeting in July. A recommendation to adopt regional qualifying would have to be forwarded to the NCAA Executive Committee for approval.

The survey was drafted by Jan Brogan, women's tennis coach at the University of California, Berkeley, with assistance from Cissie Leary, women's tennis coach at the University of Pennsylvania. Both are members of the Division I women's subcommittee.

Survey responses from the nation's 25 top-ranked teams (as of December 7, 1993) also were tallied.

Results

Overall, survey results clearly indicate a preference for regional-qualifying play. Of 224 respondents, 168 (75.0 percent) favor adopting such a format, while 49 (21.9 percent) are opposed.

Those associated with the 25 top-ranked institutions were not so supportive. Of 20 institutions responding, 11 (55 percent) voted against regional qualifying.

While regional qualifying was the focus of the survey, coaches and administrators also were asked about implementation of a team-only format, as well as questions about team-championship field size and competition format.

On the issue of implementing a team-only format, more than 60 percent of those surveyed were opposed, while two-thirds (66.5 percent) voted in favor of holding individual championships as a non-NCAA event if a team-only format is adopted. Both questions were based on the premise that regional qualifying would be approved.

"Being an administrator," Murphey said, "my biggest concerns are: How much class time are the athletes going to miss, and how is the financial impact going to be handled? If athletes participate in the championships for the entire time, they could miss almost two weeks of class."

"The subcommittee is very concerned when exams are scheduled and how much class the athletes are going to miss. That's why we surveyed administrators. Then, there's the financial impact. Will the NCAA reimburse expenses? Can schools feel comfortable with regional qualifying if they have to come up with the budget to participate? Those two items are primary in the minds of administrators."

Other questions

On the number of teams at the championships, coaches and administrators clearly favor the current championships field of 20; 155 of 224 respondents (69 percent) prefer keeping the field intact. Seventy-five percent of individuals associated with top-25 teams voted for a 20-team format.

Finally, the survey inquired about the competition format. Options included the "3-6" format (doubles followed by singles with all matches being best-two-of-three sets), the Division I men's format (three eight-game pro-set doubles matches worth one point, followed by six singles matches played best-two-of-three sets), the current format or another format.

There was no clear favorite, as 38.4 percent selected the current format and 36.2 percent chose the men's format.

Murphey says the survey results are invaluable, but admits the issue is far from settled.

"This will be the primary agenda item at our summer meeting," she said. "We may have to consider restructuring regions or at least look back over history and see which regions have had the most success. We will continue to study and investigate all options as we stay committed to recommending what is best for collegiate tennis and the student-athlete."

what happened after the team championship, the individual championships seemed so very anticlimactic."

That may soon change.

As part of the proposals, four men's and four women's teams from each of four regions would advance to the national championship. The two top-ranked teams from each region, as determined by the respective men's and women's subcommittees, automatically would advance. The remaining two slots would be determined by regional-qualifying play in which as many as four teams at two regional sites would compete, with the winner at each regional site advancing. The team championship, which would be held over a four-day period, then would showcase the 16 teams. Each

Applications for 1995 Final Four tickets now being taken

Ticket applications now are being accepted for the 1995 NCAA Final Four. The event will be April 1 and 3 at the Kingdome in Seattle.

Ticket prices are $70, $50 and $35, depending upon seat location. Approximately 8,000 seats will be allocated to the general public. Applications are being accepted through April 22, 1994.

To order tickets for the 1995 Final Four, the official order form or a photocopy of the form must be used. The form can be obtained by calling 900/646-1995, 24 hours a day and seven days a week (cost: $1 for first minute, 50 cents for each additional minute).

The form also can be requested by mail. The address is 1995 Final Four Tickets, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422.

Payments without official application forms will not be accepted. Reproduction of the order form is permissible only if done in its entirety.

A personal check and the application form should be sent to NCAA Final Four, c/o UMB, N.A., P.O. Box 1995, Kansas City, Missouri 64141.

Application instructions

Separate application forms must accompany each check. Each check should be for the correct amount and should be made payable to the "NCAA Final Four." A $2 nonrefundable handling fee is charged for each order. All checks should be made payable in U.S. currency. Checks submitted for the incorrect amount will be returned and the accompanying application disqualified.

Each check will be deposited upon receipt. If an applicant's check is deposited, that indicates that the application has been received and will be included in the selection process. It does not mean the applicant will receive tickets.

Interest income generated by ticket-application moneys will be used to help support one or more of the NCAA's youth programs and drug-education efforts.

Ticket applications must be received (not postmarked) no later than midnight April 22, 1994. Applications received after that date will be returned unopened to the sender. The NCAA will not make exceptions for late applications delayed by mail service. The NCAA and UMB are not responsible for returning incorrect applications to the sender before the April 22, 1994, deadline.

Tickets for individual sessions are not available. Each ticket admits the bearer to two semifinal games (April 1) and the championship game (April 3). No readmittance will be permitted if a ticket holder exits the facility. Every person, regardless of age, must have a ticket for admission.

Selection information

All qualified applications will be included in the selection process; however, only one application per household (for example, same last name and same address) may be selected in the otherwise random selection process. Each applicant must apply in his or her own name.

No application will be accepted for more than two tickets. Applicants are requested not to send a self-addressed stamped envelope.

No preference will be given on the basis of when qualified applications are received.

In May, a random computerized drawing including all qualified applications will be held to determine the recipients of available tickets. Selection results will not be publicized. Unsuccessful applicants will be sent a full refund (less the $2 handling fee) on or about June 30, 1994. Persons successful in the drawing will be sent game tickets on or about June 30, 1994. Tickets may not be returned, refunded or exchanged.

Information regarding disabled seating will be distributed with game tickets to those selected in the drawing.

Investigation procedures

The only person who is permitted to initiate an investigation of tickets or refund checks that are not received is the person whose name is on the original application, regardless of the owner of the funds used to apply.

All inquiries must be in writing to NCAA, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211, and must include a photocopy of the original completed application form and a copy of the front and back sides of the canceled application check. Therefore, it is imperative that each applicant keep a copy of his or her original completed application form. Inquiries regarding the status of refund checks and/or game tickets will not be investigated until after July 15, 1994.

Unless specifically authorized in advance by the NCAA, tickets may not be offered as a prize in a sweepstakes or contest.

The NCAA is not responsible for tickets or refund checks that are undeliverable due to incorrect or illegible names and addresses on applications.

The NCAA reserves the right, in its sole discretion, to interpret compliance with the letter and intent of these instructions and to disqualify noncomplying applications at any time before the distribution of tickets.

Wrongful use of the mails in connection with a ticket application could cause the initiation of action by the postal authorities or by the U.S. Department of Justice.

I women's volleyball seeks change to eight districts

Regional realignment dominated discussion during the NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Committee's February 22-25 meeting in Austin, Texas.

After reviewing reasons for realignment and comments and suggestions from coaches and administrators, the committee decided to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee a realignment from four regions into eight districts.

Under the proposal, eight teams would be seeded into the championship on a national basis. Each of the eight teams would be placed in different districts with the highest-ranked team staying in its natural district wherever possible.

Teams would be placed in the bracket so that if seeded teams advance, the following would meet in the regional finals: Nos. 1 and 8; Nos. 2 and 7; Nos. 3 and 6, and Nos. 4 and 5.

The eight districts then would feed into the following four regions: East, Central, Mountain and Pacific. District pairings for regional tournaments would be rotated with consideration given to containment of travel costs (see accompanying chart).

The committee formulated the proposal based on the following principles (in no particular order of priority): Numerical balance of

Other highlights

In other actions during its February 22-25 meeting in Austin, Texas, the Division I Women's Volleyball Committee:

■ Recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that Cleveland State University serve as host for the 1996 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship.

■ Changed the ratings percentage index used in championship selection to the 25-50-25 model currently used by the Division I baseball and men's and women's basketball committees.

■ Recommended the following automatic-qualifying conferences for the 1994 championship: Atlantic Coast, Atlantic 10, Big East, Big Eight, Big Ten, Big West, Great Midwest, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic, Mid-American Athletic, Midwestern Collegiate, Missouri Valley, Pacific-10, Southeastern, Southwest, Sun Belt, West Coast and Western Athletic Conferences.

■ Determined the following pairings for play-ins into the 1994 championship: Mid-Continent Conference at Big Sky Conference; Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference at Colonial Athletic Association; Southwestern Athletic Conference at Southland Conference; Southern Conference at Big South Conference; Ohio Valley Conference at Trans America Conference; Northeast Conference at Patriot League, and Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference at Ivy Group.

the districts; balance of strength between districts, with the ratings-percentage index used as one of the tools in assessing strength; geographical location; visibility and promotion of volleyball; national seeding to balance the strength of the bracket and provide the opportunity for the strongest teams to advance in the championship, and accessibility to the championship.

The proposal, if approved, would go into effect beginning with the 1995 championship.

Proposed districts

Following is a list of the eight districts that would be created under the Division I Women's Volleyball Committee's realignment proposal:

■ District 1 (47 institutions)—Big East, Atlantic 10, North Atlantic and Metro Atlantic Athletic Conferences, Patriot League, and Ivy Group.

■ District 2 (41 institutions)—Big Ten, Mid-American Athletic, Midwestern Collegiate and Northeast Conferences.

■ District 3 (33 institutions)—Atlantic Coast, Big South and Mid-Eastern Athletic Conferences, and Colonial Athletic Association.

■ District 4 (35 institutions)—Southeastern, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic, Trans America Athletic and Southern Conferences.

■ District 5 (34 institutions)—Big Eight, Missouri Valley, Great Midwest and Mid-Continent Conferences, and Oral Roberts University.

■ District 6 (33 institutions)—Southwest, Sun Belt, Ohio Valley and Southwestern Athletic Conferences.

■ District 7 (30 institutions)—Western Athletic, Big West and Southland Conferences; California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, and California State University, Northridge.

■ District 8 (27 institutions)—Pacific-10, West Coast and Big Sky Conferences, and California State University, Sacramento.

Regional rotation

The following chart outlines district pairings for regional tournaments in the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship:

	East	Central	Mountain	Pacific
First year	1 and 4	2 and 3	6 and 7	5 and 8
Second year	1 and 3	2 and 4	5 and 7	6 and 8
Third year	1 and 2	3 and 4	5 and 6	7 and 8

To determine the rotation, the country would be divided in half, with District 1 always remaining in the East region and Districts 2, 3 and 4 rotating between the East and Central regions. District 8 always would remain in the Pacific region and Districts 5, 6 and 7 would rotate between the Mountain and Pacific regions. The rotation would be repeated every three years.

II women's volleyball makes automatic qualification suggestions

The NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Committee, meeting February 22-25 in Kansas City, Missouri, discussed the impact automatic qualification will have on the regionalization model for the 1994 Division II Women's Volleyball Championship.

Toward that end, the committee recommended the following conferences for automatic qualification for the 1994 championship: the California Collegiate Athletic Association and the Northern California Athletic, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic, Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic, Colorado Athletic, and Sunshine State Conferences.

The committee will continue to analyze the viability of awarding automatic-qualification privileges at future meetings.

For the 1994 championship, the committee will allot the following number of berths to the eight regions: Atlantic, three; Great Lakes, three; North Central, four; Northeast, three; Northwest, four; South, three; South Central, four, and Southwest, four.

The number of berths per region will remain the same until a shift in strength under the regionalization formula determines otherwise.

I men's soccer recommends future sites

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee will recommend Richmond, Virginia, as the site of the 1995 and 1996 NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championships.

The subcommittee will ask for approval of its choice from the NCAA Executive Committee in May.

If approved as expected, the championships will be December 7 and 9, 1995, and December 13 and 15, 1996, at the University of Richmond Stadium. That stadium seats 22,611, double the capacity of the 1992-1993 site.

Schedule for softball rankings is changed

Division I women's softball coaches and sports information directors are being informed that the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee has changed the release schedule for its top-25 rankings.

The subcommittee will release rankings on the following Wednesdays: March 30, April 13, April 27 and May 11.

Division I Women's Basketball

Two national poll-toppers lead field

Event: 1994 Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Overview: Tennessee and Penn State have one loss each and have taken turns holding the No. 1 ranking during the season. Tennessee is one of six Southeastern Conference teams ranked in the top 25. Penn State leads three ranked Big Ten Conference teams. Florida International, a relative newcomer to the top 25, is 21-3, with losses at Texas Tech, Southeastern Louisiana and Georgia.

Field: The championship allows for a field of 64 teams. Automatic qualification has been granted to 32 conferences. The remaining 32 teams will be selected at large. Teams will be selected for the tournament by March 13.

Dates and sites: First-round games will be played March 16, with second-round competition March 19 or 20. Regional semifinals and finals will be March 24 and 26. The national semifinals occur April 2. The championship game will be played April 3. First- and second-round games will be on the campuses of competing schools. Regional competition will be at predetermined sites. The Women's Final Four will be in Richmond, Virginia.

Results: Scores from first- and second-round competition will appear in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News. Regional scores will be published March 30. Results from the Women's Final Four will appear in the April 6 issue of the News.

Television coverage: The regional semifinals will be broadcast live on Prime Sports Network. ESPN will televise the regional finals live. CBS Sports will carry the national semifinals and championship final live.

Championship notes: Louisiana Tech and Tennessee are the only teams that have made an appearance in all 12 Division I championships.

What they are saying

Cindy Russo, head coach Florida International

"Both Connecticut and Seton Hall are playing very well and dominating. They have had strong, impressive victories and could be teams to look out for in the NCAA tournament."

Division I Men's Basketball

Tournament has no clear-cut favorite Event: 1994 Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Overview: While Arkansas has spent the most time as the nation's No. 1 ranked team, parity has proven to be a buzzword this season. Kentucky, North Carolina, Kansas and Duke all have spent at least one week at the top of the polls. The Great Midwest Conference has made an impressive showing with four of its seven teams ranked in The Associated Press top 25 at various times. St. Louis was 22-3 through 25 games. Missouri, picked to finish third in the Big Eight Conference, became the first team since 1971 to finish play in that league undefeated (14-0).

Field: The championship provides for a field of 64 teams. Automatic qualification has been granted to 30 conferences. The remaining 34 teams will be selected at large. Teams will be selected for the tournament by March 13.

Dates and sites: First-round games will be played March 17-18, with second-round competition March 19-20. Regional semifinals will be March 24-25 and regional finals will be played March 26-27. The national semifinals occur April 2. The championship game will be played April 4. All rounds of the tournament will be played at predetermined sites. The Final Four will be in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Results: Scores from first- and second-round competition will appear in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News. Regional scores will be published March 30. Results from the Final Four will appear in the April 6 issue of the News.

Television coverage: All rounds of the championship will be televised live by CBS Sports.

Championship notes: The state of North Carolina has been well-represented in the tournament in the past, with 10 teams making a total of 90 appearances.

What they are saying

Charlie Spoonhour, head coach
St. Louis

"Sometimes when you're around a particular team and see it so much, you don't always think of it as the top team in the country. You tend to think that they're good, but probably not as good as some of the high-profile teams like Carolina, Duke, Kentucky. But I've seen Missouri a lot on TV. Right now, (coach Norm Stewart's) team is playing as well as anyone....I see them as well-equipped to do some damage in the tournament as they've ever been."

One of the surprise teams in Division I this season has been St. Louis, which is led by guard Erwin Claggett.

Men's and Women's Fencing

Penn State appears ready to return to winner's circle

Event: 1994 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Fencing Championships.

Overview: After finishing second overall in the last two championships, Penn State is poised to repeat its title-winning performances of 1990 and 1991. The Nittany Lions have a deep, balanced squad that features five all-Americans—at least one at each weapon—and individual champions Thomas Strzalkowski (sabre, 1992 and 1993), Olga Chernyak (1992) and Olga Kalinovskaya (1993). Defending champion Columbia-Barnard still is strong but not as dominant as in the past; the Lions will join Yale, Princeton, St. John's (New York), Pennsylvania and New York University on the list of Eastern powers trying to derail Penn State. Notre Dame and Stanford are best in the Midwest and West, respectively. The Fighting Irish are strongest in men's and women's foil, and the Cardinal will contend for the women's foil crown. Once again, the key to the overall team title will be the epee team event; it is the most unpredictable weapon, and it is fenced last. Only one team has claimed the overall title without winning the team epee.

Field: Eight three-man teams will compete for team titles in each of three men's weapon events: foil, epee and sabre. Twelve four-woman teams will compete for the team title in women's foil. Minimum fields of 24 fencers will compete for individual titles in women's foil and men's foil, epee and sabre. The NCAA Executive Committee has authorized a maximum of 154 fencers to compete in the combined-scoring championships.

Dates and site: Brandeis will host the championships March 18-22.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 30 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: This will be the fifth year for the combined men's and women's championships and the last under the current scoring system. In 1995, women's epee will be added and all competitors will be selected on an individual basis. Teams will accumulate points according to the performance of their fencers in each of five weapon events: men's epee, foil and sabre and women's epee and foil....No team has finished in the top three overall without qualifying a weapon squad in all four events, and no team has taken the overall title with a weapon squad finishing lower than fifth.

What they are saying

Joe Fazekas, head coach
Cleveland State

"(The championship) always seems to come down to the epee because it is fenced last and virtually anything can happen. Unlike basketball, where somebody else can pour in 30 points if the star has a bad game, nobody can make up more than three points in team epee. If there's going to be an upset, it probably will happen in epee."

Division I Wrestling

Three-time defending champion Iowa braces for the return of Oklahoma State Event: 1994 Division I Wrestling Championships.

Overview: Iowa—which won a record nine straight team titles from 1978 to 1986—is on another streak. The Hawkeyes are shooting for their fourth consecutive team championship. The dual-meet season, however, wasn't quite up to usual Iowa standards. Dan Gable's squad went 11-3, dropping three matches for the first time since 1988, when it finished second nationally. No one, however, is sounding the Iowa death toll. Last year figured to be a dogfight with no clear-cut favorite, and Iowa ran away from the pack. Even so, Oklahoma State—with three wrestlers ranked first at their weights (Iowa has none) and absent last year because of probation—appears to be the favorite on paper. Minnesota, which never has finished better than fourth in the championships, went 20-2 in duals, beating both Iowa and Oklahoma State. The jury is still out, however, on the Golden Gophers' tournament strength. Individually, five champions return, led by the Cowboys' Pat Smith, who will attempt to become the first four-time champion in Division I tournament history.

Field: A total of 330 wrestlers will compete for individual championships in 10 weights. The team champion is determined by placement and advancement points accumulated as the wrestlers compete for individual championships.

Dates and site: March 17-19 at North Carolina.

Results: Results of the championships round (excluding consolation results) will be published in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Television coverage: CBS will air a one-hour highlight show of the championships at 3 p.m. (Eastern time) April 23.

Championships notes: With a capacity of 21,500, North Carolina's Smith Center is the largest facility to host the championships....The per-session attendance record is 11,694, set in Iowa City in 1991.

What they are saying

John Smith, head coach
Oklahoma State

"We have guys who stayed with us and sat out last year, and that's made us a little hungrier. It's also a disadvantage not being there last year. The team is where it needs to be. A majority of the guys have expectations of being national champions, and if they maintain that goal, things will fall into place."

Dan Gable, head coach
Iowa

"We haven't wrestled as a team that well. We're hoping for the best at the end of the season. We're doing some things we're not used to in Iowa wrestling (three dual-meet losses). If we don't correct them it will be a struggle. We're not happy with our performance but feel we have good potential."

Division I Women's Swimming and Diving

Stanford pursues third straight title

Event: 1994 Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: Stanford seeks to make it three team titles in a row behind Jenny Thompson and Lea Loveless, each of whom are defending champions in two events. Perennial challengers Florida and Texas will push the Cardinal once again, with Michigan and Southern Methodist bidding for a top-three finish.

Field: The maximum number of participants allowed is 270. All qualifiers who have met the "A" time standard will be admitted in the meet; those who have met the "B" time standard will be considered until an event is filled. No team is allowed more than 18 competitors. An entrant who swims is counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives is counted as one competitor and an entrant who dives only is counted as one-third of a competitor.

Dates and site: The championships will be March 17-19 at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Television coverage: The championships will be broadcast tape-delayed by CBS at 2 p.m. (Eastern time) April 17.

Championships notes: Stanford's string of dual-meet victories stands at 44 after the Cardinal finished their regular season with a sweep of Southern California, UCLA, Texas and California. Against Texas—the last team to beat the Cardinal (in 1988)—Jenny Thompson won three events and Lea Loveless two. Texas' Kristi Busico won both breaststrokes....Thompson is a nominee for the Sullivan Award, which honors the nation's top amateur athlete. The most recent swimmer to win the award was Janet Evans in 1989....Florida's Nicole Haislett will be going for her fourth consecutive victory in the 200-yard freestyle. She would be only the fourth swimmer in championships history to win four consecutive titles in the same event.

Michigan photo

Michigan's title hopes rely in part on Lara Hooiveld, who won the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes at last year's championships. But the Wolverines could use additional help — Hooiveld is not competing in the 200-yard breaststroke at this season's championships.

What they are saying

Jim Richardson, head coach
Michigan

"Things really fell into place for us last year, but we're not 100 percent this year because of injuries and illness. Lara Hooiveld (defending champion in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes) won't even compete in the 200-yard breaststroke this year, so we'll have to dig deep and see what happens. Stanford, Florida and Texas look good as usual, and I was impressed with the way Auburn and Alabama competed at the Southeastern Conference championships. And though Mark Schubert doesn't have a huge team at Southern California, he's got what looks to be the right pieces to fit a top-five puzzle."

Division III Men's Swimming and Diving

UC San Diego narrows Kenyon gap

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: If anyone can end Kenyon's streak of 14 consecutive team titles, it is UC San Diego, which continues to narrow the gap each year. This year's Triton squad features a three-time champion from 1993, Travis Miller, and sprint freestyle specialist John Flowers. Kenyon is still loaded with juniors: notably John Cave, John Rule, Andy Eaton and Kevin Fease, who clinched the team title for the Lords last year with his victory in the 1,650-yard freestyle. In fact, Kenyon has two 1,650-yard freestyle champions—Fease and senior captain Chad Stedman, the 1992 titlist.

Field: The maximum number of participants allowed is 209. All qualifiers who have met the "A" time standard will be admitted in the meet; those who have met the "B" time standard will be considered for the field. No team is allowed more than 18 competitors. An entrant who swims is counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives is counted as one competitor and an entrant who dives only is counted as one-third of a competitor.

Dates and site: Williams will host the championships March 17-19.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: For the second consecutive year, a Johns Hopkins freshman was named swimmer of the year in the University Athletic Association. The Blue Jays' Andrew Whitney won the 200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyles during the UAA championships and will team with defending Division III 50-yard freestyle champion Eric Steidinger to give Johns Hopkins a one-two punch.

What they are saying

Jim Steen, head coach
Kenyon

"From what we know about the returnees from both our team and UC San Diego, we've got a bit of a point deficit to make up. Johns Hopkins will be in the race, too. George Kennedy (Johns Hopkins coach) has done a great job bringing that team back."

No surprise: Central Oklahoma wins II wrestling

Central Oklahoma won four weights and racked up 127½ points to overwhelm the field at the NCAA Division II Wrestling Championships March 4-5 at Southern Colorado.

Coach-of-the-year honoree David James' Bronchos—who have won three consecutive team titles and never finished lower than second in four years of Division II competition—distanced themselves from second-place Mankato State by 61¾ points, the largest margin of victory in the tournament since 1982. That year, Cal State Bakersfield, now a Division I team, ran away from second-place North Dakota State, 166½ to 78¾.

Central Oklahoma was led by Wes White, who won at 158 pounds for the second consecutive year by downing North Dakota State's Joel Vettel, 13-5, in the final. The Bronchos also won three consecutive weights early: 126 pounds, as Brian Melchiori, the tournament's most outstanding wrestler, pinned Northern Colorado's Chris Nelson at 2:36; 134 pounds, as Ryan Martin nipped Nebraska-Kearney's Martin Segovia, 7-5, in sudden death, and 142 pounds, where Jerry Best downed Minnesota-Duluth's Ron McClure, 9-3.

The Bronchos might have swept the night's first four events, but North Dakota State's Brian Kapusta defeated 1992 champion Randy Zellner of Central Oklahoma, 3-1, in sudden death at 118 pounds. The bout was a rematch of last year's final, when Kapusta notched a 3-2 victory over Zellner.

Of five defending champions, only White and Kapusta repeated. Jim Gale of Mankato State was the first to fall, as Portland State's Hiag Brown claimed a 3-1 victory in the 150-pound final.

Central Oklahoma's Keith Cunningham, who won at 158 in 1992 and at 167 last year, lost the newer title to Mankato State's Jason Smith, 7-6.

Two-time heavyweight champion Jason Bingaman of Lake Superior State also fell, bowing to Wisconsin-Parkside's Jim Bezotte, 5-3, in the final.

Ithaca escapes to win III wrestling crown

The NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships came down to the next-to-last match of the tournament—the finals at 190 pounds. Ithaca's Steve Farr was paired against Wartburg's Jon Dawley, and the winner's school would be team champion.

The match turned out to be as close as the team race. Farr prevented a Dawley escape in the tiebreaker and was credited with a 1-1 victory, giving Ithaca the title, 77½-75, at Wisconsin-Stevens Point March 4-5.

Farr had to take three injury timeouts during the match, because of knee-ligament damage suffered during the regular season.

"We knew going in that it could happen this way," said Ithaca coach John Murray, who was named Division III coach of the year. "We were aging by the moment. There isn't another wrestler who could do what he did."

In a tournament that produced 10 champions from 10 schools, Ithaca also had finalists at 150 pounds—where Buena Vista's Brian Stewart triumphed over Kent Maslin, 8-7—and at 158 pounds—where Wisconsin-Stout's Corey McCauley downed Matt Sorochinsky, 2-1, in sudden death. McCauley was last year's runner-up at ■ See championships results: Page 12.

The team championship was Ithaca's third overall and first since 1990. Brockport State holds the record with five.

Only three other team races have been closer in the tournament's 31-year history, including last year's tournament, when Augsburg edged Wartburg, 93-92. The closest contest was in 1979, when Trenton State nipped Brockport State, 77½-77½.

Raphael Wilson of Augustana (Illinois) was honored as most outstanding wrestler after capturing the title at 142 pounds, where he downed Trenton State's John Johnson, 6-5, in the final. Wilson also won the award in 1992, when he won at 134 pounds. He was fifth at that weight last season.

Trenton State heavyweight Glen Sandull, the only returning champion from last year, successfully defended his title with a 5-3 sudden-death decision over Eric Thomas of Olivet.

Case Reserve's Chris Ricklic won the 167-pound class and finished the season with a 32-0 record.

■ Infractions case: Washington State University

I. Introduction.

A. Case chronology.

In October 1991, the Pacific-10 Conference learned that a Washington State University student-athlete who had worked in the institution's athletics department had, in addition to his pay, received a waiver of the nonresident portion of his tuition and fees. In November 1991, the associate commissioner of the Pacific-10 Conference visited the institution and, with officials of the institution, investigated the situation. They learned that nonresident student-athletes in the baseball and men's cross country and track and field programs had been granted nonresident tuition waivers based on their employment at the institution. The student-athletes' wages had been properly counted in the institution's equivalency financial-aid calculations, but the value of the tuition waivers had not been counted even though the equivalency calculation included the full out-of-state grant amount.

As a result, the Pacific-10 Conference, on February 7, 1992, issued a Notice of Charges. The institution immediately initiated an internal investigation. As part of the investigation, the University Office of Internal Audits conducted interviews with student-athletes, coaches and athletics administrators, and reviewed student timecards and all related documents filed in the institution's offices. In addition to the violations stemming from student employment and waivers of nonresident tuition, several other secondary violations were discovered.

After completion of the institution's investigation, during spring 1992, the Pacific-10 Conference Compliance and Enforcement Committee held hearings with the institution's officials. The committee issued a report June 15, 1992. The committee recommendations were approved by the Pacific-10 Council and ratified by the chief executive officers at a meeting June 20-21, 1992. The conference adopted the penalties, self-imposed by the institution, that reduced the grants-in-aid in baseball and men's cross country and track and field for a period of four years. The conference added several penalties that included probation for a period of two years, annual conference compliance reviews during that period, a one-year ban on postseason competition in baseball and men's track and field, and forfeiture of the 1985 and 1991 conference team championships in track and field.

The conference then submitted its report to the NCAA. On October 26, 1992, the enforcement staff met with the associate commissioner and with administrators from the institution. The enforcement staff conducted interviews from October 1992 until March 1993 with several coaches, student-athletes, athletics department and other university administrators, and former student-athletes and administrators.

The assistant executive director for enforcement and eligibility appeals issued a letter of official inquiry March 22, 1993. The allegations in the official inquiry were identical to the violations contained in the conference report except that the official inquiry applied to a shorter period of time and named the head coaches of baseball and men's cross country and track and field in the allegation of lack of institutional control. The enforcement staff applied the statute of limitations set forth in NCAA Bylaw 32.5.2 because the case did not present a pattern of willful violations. The conference found that its statute of limitations did not apply and considered earlier incidents that the NCAA statute of limitations prevented the Committee on Infractions from considering.

On September 3, 1993, the staff and the institution, with the consent of all involved individuals, jointly submitted a report to the NCAA Committee on Infractions requesting use of the summary-disposition procedures. The enforcement staff reported to the Committee on Infractions that it believed the institution's internal investigation and the Pacific-10 Conference's investigation, combined with the enforcement staff's inquiries, had resulted in a complete and thorough examination of the issues relating to potential violations of NCAA legislation in the conduct of the athletics program at Washington State.

The enforcement staff also reported to the committee that, during the processing of this case, the university met the level of cooperation required under NCAA legislation. The enforcement staff and the university agreed with the findings contained in the report and that the findings consti-

Case summary

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at Washington State University on probation for three years for violations of NCAA legislation concerning athletics grants-in-aid. Washington State violated university policy in granting nonresident tuition waivers for out-of-state student-athletes.

The violations took place from the 1988-89 through the 1991-92 academic years. The Pacific-10 Conference investigated the allegations and issued its own report and penalties in 1992.

Many out-of-state baseball and men's cross country and track and field student-athletes received nonresident tuition waivers against university policy. The policy requires that nonresident tuition waivers be awarded only to students who are employed for or in support of an academic department of the university. The student-athletes in question were employed for the athletics department, which is not an academic department. Also, some student-athletes were paid and given tuition waivers for work not performed.

The athletics department also failed to count the value of the nonresident tuition waivers toward the total amount of financial aid awarded to student-athletes in the sports involved. As a result, Washington State awarded more than the maximum grants-in-aid allowed in baseball and men's cross country and track and field. Washington State awarded an average of 1.37 baseball grants and 2.10 cross country and track and field grants in excess of the limit during the four-year period.

The Committee on Infractions also found NCAA rules violations, as reported by the institution and found by the conference, in areas including:

- A faculty member provided funds to a redshirt student-athlete to participate in an open track meet, resulting in a benefit not available to other students.

- Washington State provided financial aid to a student-athlete who did not meet NCAA freshman eligibility requirements and allowed that student-athlete to practice and compete.

- Washington State required student-athletes to spend more time in athletically related activities in excess of NCAA weekly limits.

The committee also found that the baseball and men's cross country and track and field coaches failed to exercise appropriate control and monitoring over their programs and that Washington State did not exercise appropriate institutional control and monitoring of those programs.

The case was handled under the summary-disposition procedure, which the institution and the NCAA enforcement staff can agree to follow in major infractions cases. This process may be used if the member institution, involved individuals and NCAA enforcement staff agree on the facts and that those facts constitute major violations of NCAA legislation. The institution proposes suggested penalties, which the Committee on Infractions can accept, reject or change.

In addition to the three-year probation, one year longer than the period imposed by the Pacific-10 Conference, the committee adopted sanctions that were self-imposed by Washington State and the conference, including:

tuted major violations of NCAA rules. The enforcement staff recommended that this case qualified for adjudication through the summary-disposition process.

The Committee on Infractions considered Washington State's summary-disposition report in Kansas City, Missouri, November 13, 1993.

B. Summary of the findings of violations.

The actions described in the summary-disposition report resulted in the following findings of violations of NCAA rules:

- Granting tuition waivers to student-athletes inconsistent with the institution's policy.

- Paying wages and granting tuition waivers to student-athletes for work that was not performed.

- Granting financial aid awards in excess of NCAA limits for baseball, men's cross country and track and field by excluding the value of nonresident tuition waivers from equivalency calculations.

- Providing funds to a redshirt student-athlete to participate in an open track meet.

- Providing financial aid to and permitting practice and competition by a student-athlete who did not meet NCAA initial-eligibility requirements.

- Requiring athletically related activities by baseball student-athletes in excess of weekly NCAA limits.

- Not informing student-athletes whose athletics aid was graduated of their right to a hearing.

- Not exercising appropriate institutional control and monitoring of the institution's athletics program with regard to its programs in baseball and men's cross country and track and field.

- The respective head coaches failing to exercise appropriate control and monitoring over the operation of the baseball and men's cross country and track and field programs.

C. Summary of the penalties and corrective actions.

1. The committee accepted the following corrective actions that the institution self-imposed:

- Banning additional recruitment in baseball and men's cross country and track and field for the 1992-93 academic year;

- Instituting a system to monitor aid awards;

- Eliminating the jobs program that permitted student-athletes to work for the athletics department and that provided employment-based tuition waivers for the work;

- Conducting an audit of all compliance areas and instituting annual reviews.

- Informing all individuals involved in the violations of the relevant NCAA regulations.

- Accepting the retirement of the head baseball coach and reassigning the head men's cross country and track and field coach.

2. The committee adopted the following penalties that the institution and the Pacific-10 Conference imposed:

- Reducing the number of grants-in-aid in men's cross country and track and field for four years.

- Reducing the number of grants-in-aid in men's baseball for four years.

- Prohibiting postseason play in baseball and men's track and field for one year.

- Forfeiting the conference championships in men's track and field in 1985 and 1991.

3. On January 21, 1994, the Committee on Infractions notified the institution of its decision to impose the following addi-

- Reducing the number of grants-in-aid in men's cross country and track and field and in men's baseball for four years.

- Prohibiting postseason play in baseball and men's track and field for 1992-93.

- Forfeiting the conference championships in men's track and field in 1985 and 1991.

The committee imposed the following additional penalties:

- Applying the repeat violator rule for five years.

- Publicly reprimanding, censuring and placing the institution on probation for three years.

- Requiring the continued development of the university's comprehensive athletics educational program.

- Recertifying current athletics policies and practices.

The committee's findings normally would subject the institution to minimum penalties prescribed by the NCAA membership for major violations. These penalties include a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, and the loss of postseason competition and television opportunities for one year.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose lesser penalties if it determines that the case is unique. The committee concluded that this case was unique and therefore imposed less than the minimum set of penalties. In imposing its penalties, the committee took into consideration the following factors:

- Washington State's cooperation with the Pacific-10 Conference and the NCAA in the investigation and processing of the case, and

- Washington State's imposition of significant self-imposed corrective actions and penalties, including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure future rules compliance and institutional control.

Washington State took the following corrective actions:

- Banning additional recruitment in baseball, men's track and field and cross country for the 1992-93 academic year.

- Instituting a system to monitor awarding of grants-in-aid.

- Eliminating the jobs program that permitted student-athletes to work for the athletics department and that provided nonresident tuition waivers for the work.

- Conducting an audit of all compliance areas and instituting annual reviews.

- Informing all individuals involved in the violations of the relevant NCAA regulations.

- Accepting the retirement of the head baseball coach and reassigning the head men's cross country and track and field coach to a position outside of athletics.

Washington State admitted the violation of NCAA rules under the summary-disposition procedure, accepted the penalties proposed by the Committee on Infractions, and waived its opportunity to appeal.

tional penalties:

- Publicly reprimanding, censuring and placing the institution on probation for three years.

- Applying the repeat violator rule for five years.

- Requiring the continued development of the university's comprehensive educational program for athletics.

- Forfeiting the team standings in baseball and men's cross country and track and field, if any, in NCAA championship play in which ineligible student-athletes participated during the 1988-89 through 1991-92 academic years.

- Recertifying current athletics policies and practices.

II. Specific findings of violations.

A. [NCAA Bylaws 12.1.2-(a), 12.4.1-(a), 15.01.2 and 15.3.2.1]

During the 1988-89 through 1991-92 academic years, many nonresident baseball, men's cross country, and track and field student-athletes received nonresident tuition waivers contrary to university policy as a result of their employment in the athletics department. Their employment was not consistent with university policy that required such employment to be for or in support of an academic department of the institution in order to qualify for a waiver. Some student-athletes received wages and were provided nonresident tuition for work not performed.

The problems with regard to violations of the institution's policy began when a state statute was enacted in 1982 that permitted tuition waivers only for work performed for or in support of an academic department. The institution's audit and interviews conducted as part of the conference's and NCAA enforcement staff's investigations revealed that some of the work did not qualify under the statute.

The head men's cross country and track and field coach did not provide the appropriate job descriptions to the athletics business office. Rather, he kept these job descriptions, which did not meet the statute's requirements, in his files. Some students did not work sufficient hours to qualify for aid under the statute, even though the students' timecards stated that they worked sufficient hours. In one case, the head baseball coach admitted that in 1991-92 he continued to sign timecards for an injured student-athlete even though he was aware that the student athlete was not performing the work specified on the timecards.

B. [NCAA Bylaws 15.02.3.1 and 15.5.3.1]

During the 1988-89 through 1991-92 academic years, the institution exceeded the NCAA financial aid limits of 13 grants-in-aid in baseball and 14 in men's cross country and track and field by excluding from the equivalency calculations the nonresident tuition waivers provided to student-athletes who were employed by the athletics department, as mentioned in Part II-A. The following chart identifies the excess number of equivalency grants-in-aid awarded:

Academic Year	Baseball	Cross Country/ Track and Field
1988-89	.68	.78
1989-90	.95	3.67
1990-91	.28	2.22
1991-92	3.57	1.71
Total	5.48	8.38

C. [NCAA Bylaws 12.1.2-(f), 14.01.5.1, 16.02.3 and 16.11.2.4]

In the spring 1989, a university faculty member provided $473 in personal funds

See Infractions case, page 17 ►

Infractions case

to a former student-athlete, who was a member of a local community track club, to pay the transportation expenses for a men's track and field redshirt student-athlete to travel to and compete in the National Indoor Championships of The Athletic Congress (TAC). These funds were not repaid. The student-athlete subsequently represented the university in competition during the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years.

The faculty member appeared to act on his own, consistent with his support of nonathletes at the school, and without knowledge that his payment constituted a violation of NCAA regulations.

D. [NCAA Bylaws 14.3.1.3.1-(a) and 14.3.2.1.1]

The university awarded an athletics grant-in-aid to a men's track and field student-athlete and allowed him to practice and compete during the spring 1992, a time when the student-athlete did not meet NCAA initial-eligibility requirements. Specifically, the student-athlete did not meet the requirement that the minimum entrance test scores must be achieved no later than July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first full-time enrollment or at the end of the term in which the individual completed high-school graduation requirements. The Scholastic Aptitude Test score utilized to certify the student-athlete's eligibility for the spring semester 1992 was obtained in December 1991.

During the spring term 1992, the student-athlete, who had completed his secondary education in another country, competed in five indoor and three outdoor track meets. He had been certified as eligible by an administrative assistant in the institution's compliance office after receiving information from the men's head track and field coach who believed that the rules regarding the timing of test scores were different for foreign students. Upon learning of the error, the student-athlete was declared ineligible; he withdrew from the institution at the end of the 1992 spring term.

E. [NCAA Bylaw 17.1.5.1]

For a period of time during the 1991-92 academic year, baseball student-athletes engaged in countable athletically related activities for more than four hours per day and 20 hours per week.

The excess countable activity resulted from a conditioning activity that was viewed as voluntary by the coaches but as required by the student-athletes. Review of this issue also revealed that the institution had used a new and experimental method, which the baseball student-athletes did not understand, to track countable activities. As a result, the accuracy of the records was unreliable.

F. [NCAA Bylaw 15.3.5.1]

After graduating the athletics aid of two baseball student-athletes subsequent to the 1991-92 academic year, the institution failed to notify them of their opportunity for a hearing before the institutional agency making the award.

G. [NCAA Constitution 2.1.1, 2.1.2 and 6.01.1, and Bylaws 12.1.2-(a), 12.4.1-(a), 15.01.2 and 15.3.2.1]

1. The scope and nature of the above findings demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring of the athletically related employment of student-athletes, the granting of nonresident tuition waivers and the awarding of financial aid within NCAA regulations.

2. The institution's head baseball coach and the institution's head men's cross country and track and field coach failed to demonstrate appropriate control and monitoring of the jobs performed by baseball and men's cross country and track and field student-athletes who received nonresident tuition waivers. The men's cross country and track and field coach was also the athletics compliance and eligibility administrator until 1989.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For the reasons set forth in this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved several major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.2, as adopted by the Association's membership, requires prescribed minimum penalties, subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons. The mandatory penalties include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic, in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year, or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The Committee on Infractions determined that this was a unique case in which the institution should receive less than the full set of minimum penalties otherwise required by NCAA legislation. The factors upon which this determination was based included: thorough cooperation with the Pacific-10 Conference and the NCAA in the investigation and reporting of violations; cooperation in the processing of the case; and, most significantly, imposition of significant institutional penalties and strong disciplinary and corrective actions, including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that the institution will comply with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance in the future.

A. Self-imposed corrective actions and penalties.

The institution undertook the following corrective actions:

1. Placed a ban on recruiting additional scholarship student-athletes in baseball and men's cross country and track and field for the 1992-93 academic year.

2. Recalculated the equivalencies, using the correct methodology, for each program and implemented a system for monitoring aid awards.

3. Eliminated the jobs program that permitted student-athletes to work for the athletics department in connection with work ostensibly done for the physical education department, an academic unit. Also eliminated the program that provided employment-based tuition waivers for such work. The Committee on Infractions assumed that the elimination of these programs was permanent and adopted such a permanent elimination as a penalty in this action.

4. Conducted a self-audit of all compliance areas in the athletics department and instituted annual compliance reviews of randomly selected sports.

5. Informed all individuals involved in the violations of the relevant NCAA regulations.

6. Accepted the retirement of the head baseball coach effective at the end of the academic year, May 15, 1994, and reassigned the head men's track and field coach to duties in another part of the institution unrelated to athletics, fully effective May 15, 1994. The head baseball coach held his position for 32 years and had tenure at the institution. The head men's track and field coach held his position for 25 years. As of September 1993, 40 percent of his time already was devoted to his new position.

Had the institution and the coaches not agreed to make such changes in status and activity, the institution would have been required to show cause in accordance with Bylaw 19.5.2.1-(m) why it should not be subject to additional penalties if it had failed to take appropriate disciplinary action against each coach.

B. Penalties imposed by the institution and the Pacific-10 Conference.

The institution self-imposed a number of penalties that were ratified subsequently by the Pacific-10 Conference. The Committee on Infractions accepted and adopted these institutional penalties:

1. For a period of four years, commencing with the 1992-93 academic year, the men's cross country and track and field program will be held to a limit of three fewer equivalency grants-in-aid per year than the maximum permitted under NCAA regulations.

2. For a period of four years, commencing with the 1992-93 academic year, the baseball program will be held to a limit of 1.5 fewer equivalency grants-in-aid per year than the maximum permitted under NCAA regulations.

C. Penalties imposed by the Pacific-10 Conference.

The committee adopted as its own the following penalties that the Pacific-10 Conference imposed:

1. The institution did not participate in postseason play, including NCAA and Pacific-10 Conference championships, in baseball and men's track and field during the 1992-93 academic year.

2. The university forfeited the conference championships won by its men's track and field team in 1985 and 1991.

D. Additional penalties imposed by the Committee on Infractions.

1. The institution shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on NCAA probation for a period of three years from June 21, 1992, the date that the institution was placed on probation by the Pacific-10 Conference. This penalty is one year longer than the conference probationary period.

2. The institution shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.3, concerning repeat violators, for a five-year period beginning June 21, 1992, the date that the institution was placed on probation by the Pacific-10 Conference.

3. During the period of probation, and to the extent it has not already done so, the institution shall develop and implement a comprehensive education program, including rules seminars and testing, to instruct coaches, the faculty athletics representative and athletics department personnel on NCAA legislation. In addition, the education program shall include all university staff members with responsibility for the certification of student-athletes for admission, retention or competition. The institution shall submit a preliminary report by April 15, 1994, setting forth a schedule for establishing this compliance and educational program, and file annual progress reports with the administrator for the NCAA Committee on Infractions by July 1 of each year during the probationary period. Particular emphasis should be placed on all aspects of regulations governing athletically related financial aid and the establishment of initial eligibility. This penalty is in addition to the two annual Pacific-10 Conference compliance reviews.

4. The institution shall forfeit the team standings in baseball and men's cross country and track and field, if any, in NCAA championship play in which ineligible student-athletes or student-athletes who should have been declared ineligible participated during the 1988-89 through 1991-92 academic years.

5. The institution shall recertify that all of its athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA legislation.

The Committee on Infractions reminds the institution that under Bylaw 31.2.2.4-(a), the records of ineligible men's cross country and track and field student-athletes who placed in NCAA championship competition during the 1988-89 through 1991-92 academic years will be vacated.

Because Washington State agreed to participate in the summary-disposition process, admitted the violations of NCAA rules and accepted the penalties proposed by the Committee on Infractions, the university waived its opportunity to appeal the decisions made in this case.

The Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed. The committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period and could lead to the imposition of more severe sanctions in this case.

Should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of these penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.

Survey form seeking information on need-based financial aid models is approved

The survey is being conducted in conjunction with a study of need-based financial aid systems that was recommended last year by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics and the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force.

Divisions I and II institutions adopted a resolution at the 1994 NCAA Convention directing the financial aid and amateurism committee to study financial aid models that would permit grants for tuition and fees and award additional assistance on a need basis.

The resolution directs the committee to prepare a report on the issue for the 1995 Convention and to submit legislation, if appropriate, for consideration at the 1996 Convention.

The committee is charged with studying need-based-aid models that would accomplish the goal of reducing costs without denying students access to higher education or significantly altering the competitive balance among NCAA institutions.

Committee members also discussed at their recent meeting a timetable for the study. Plans call for the committee to analyze results of the survey this summer and to prepare a preliminary report for the fall meeting of the NCAA Council.

The committee then will prepare a report for the Convention, as directed by the resolution.

In a related matter, members agreed on several components that should be included in any model that eventually is formulated and considered by the committee.

Those components, which are intended to maintain as many concepts as possible that currently are used in financial aid legislation, are as follows:

■ Models should set forth grant limits for each sport.

■ They should permit use of both head-count and equivalency methodologies.

■ The current limits on a full grant-in-aid and Pell Grant combined should remain essentially unchanged.

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 28-March 1 meeting in Amelia Island, Florida, the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism:

■ Discussed various questions that have been referred to the committee that relate in one way or another to sport-by-sport grant-in-aid limits in Divisions I and II. The committee agreed to consider the feasibility of conducting a study on the establishment of principles for determining grant limits in all Divisions I and II men's and women's sports, and will ask the NCAA Administrative Committee to consider whether such a study would be appropriate.

■ Reviewed committee-recommended proposals considered at the 1994 Convention, and recommended to the NCAA Council that it sponsor again in 1995 a proposal to require that state reciprocity agreements be considered financial aid for student-athletes participating in sports other than Division I football, basketball and ice hockey. The committee also asked the Council to request a pre-Convention interpretation that would provide for the membership an example of the application of that proposed legislation. A proposal regarding state reciprocity agreements (Proposal No. 82) was defeated at the 1994 Convention.

■ Reviewed a proposed definition of a professional athletics team or league that was developed by the NCAA Olympic Sports Liaison Committee, and endorsed the definition with minor editorial revisions. The Olympic Sports Liaison Committee wishes to propose legislation, possibly for the 1995 Convention, that would establish a new definition that is applicable to both foreign and domestic student-athletes. The financial aid and amateurism committee also recommended a review of effects the definition may have on other amateurism legislation.

■ Recommended that the Council adjust by 6.5 percent the minimum aggregate expenditure for financial aid under Division I membership requirements for the 1995-96 academic year. The Council is required by NCAA Bylaw 20.9.1.2-(b) to adjust annually the minimum aggregate amount for inflation. The recommendation would result in a 6.5 percent increase from the 1994-95 minimum aggregate expenditures of $269,000 in men's sports and $269,000 in women's sports (excluding football and men's and women's basketball). For an institution that does not sponsor men's or women's basketball, the minimum aggregate expenditure would be $350,000 for the gender without basketball.

Deaths

Mike Haase, a former all-America swimmer at North Dakota, was killed February 21 after being hit by a truck while on a biking tour in India. Haase spent four seasons beginning in 1985 on the swim teams at North Dakota. He was the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference's 100- and 200-meter backstroke champion each year during his tenure.

Obie O'Neal, former football coach and former chair of health and physical education at Albany State (Georgia), died January 31 in Albany, Georgia. He was 66.

Bob Winslow, former football coach at Arizona, died January 15 in Fallbrook, California. He was 77.

Tennis

Division II support increases for implementation of team-only championship format

team would be guaranteed four championship matches.

"We're trying to provide opportunities for people to compete for the national championship, and to give them a chance to win their way in," said Georgene A. Brock, director of women's athletics at Mankato State University and chair of the Division II women's subcommittee. "(Under the current format) some say they never have the opportunity to go."

They would under the proposal.

Involving more players

By doubling the championships fields from eight to 16 teams, 224 men and women (112 each) would compete at the championship. Those numbers more than double when regional-qualifying tournaments are included. Currently, 180 men and women (90 each) compete at the championships—seven players from each of the eight competing teams (56) and 34 singles and doubles participants.

Increased team and participation numbers are not the proposal's only results. By limiting the championships to team-only, four-day events at a common site, student-athletes would miss less class time and championship expenses likely would decrease. Currently, the men's and women's championships are each seven-day events held at different sites.

"The team format is a good choice," said Andreas Koth, men's tennis coach at Armstrong State College. "It saves a little money and time. (Under the current format) if you qualify for individual championships and your team also qualifies, you could miss 10 or 11 days. This way, you miss only four days."

While Koth favors the changes, he is concerned about how teams will be selected for regional-qualifying play. Koth says the current regional alignment would not provide fair representation.

"We still have to look at the issue more closely," he said. "If we go with regional play, we have to look at the strength of each region and maybe subdivide or create new regions. If we go to regionals, we want to get the top 16 teams in (the tournament) and not just have a washed-out field. I have nothing against regionalization, but we have to look at it very carefully."

Financial savings doubted

Critics argue that regional-qualifying tournaments will offset any financial savings and do nothing more than shift the financial burden to institutions. Bryant says that is not true. He says regional tournaments, while unofficial, already are held. Division I men's tennis is the only NCAA championship currently using regional-qualifying tournaments.

"That, in essence, is how we get our rankings," he said. "Plus, coaches know whether they have a shot to go to a regional. They know whether they have a top-10 team and they can plan accordingly. Paying our own way is a drawback, but we kind of do it anyway."

Another criticism is that the team-only format excludes singles and doubles players and teams lacking depth.

Koth, who coached 1992 men's singles champion Philipp Schertel (Armstrong State has won two of the past three men's singles titles), disagrees. He says the proposal provides teams with a much better chance of competing for the national championship, and points out that individual players still could attain recognition via the Rolex Collegiate Championships sponsored by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association.

"Since they increased the field to 16 (teams), I think it is possible for a team with one or two good players to have a chance at qualifying," he said. "If a team gets a really good player, that coach is likely to surround that player with other decent players. It is possible, with the increase from eight to 16 teams, that a No. 5 or 6 team from a region would have a shot (at qualifying)."

That, says Bryant, is the basis of the proposal: to give as many teams as possible a chance at the national championship.

The amazing support structure of family, friends and health-care professionals behind this group of athletes may well respond with even greater support for an inclusive athletics department's other programs.

Does it really make sense to engage in an expensive confrontation in the courts over equity among athletes when the law clearly mandates it? An institution that does so wastes scarce resources, clearly creates a climate of unfairness and second-class status for the excluded athletes and other students, and perhaps puts Federal funds for student loans, faculty research and institutional development at risk.

So even if an institution remains reluctant to support wheelchair athletics for whatever reasons, making this commitment still is the percentage play. The law makes that clear.

Besides, it is the right thing to do.

Oliver Ford is president of Southwest State University. Mark Goodenow is an associate professor of business law, and Lew Shaver is a professor of physical education and the wheelchair basketball coach.

Nominations

requirements are met: Robert R. Snell, Kansas State University (Region 3); Thomas C. Hansen, Pacific-10 Conference (Region 4); John V. Kasser, University of California, Berkeley (Region 4). Kasser was one of the Council representatives on the committee when he was at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He no longer is a Council member but could be reelected as a regular member if other provisions are met.

Eligible for reelection if elected as one of the Council representatives: Warner Alford, University of Mississippi.

Not eligible for reelection: Robert W. Mullen, La Salle University (Region 1); Sondra Norrell-Thomas, Howard University (Region 1); R. Daniel Beebe, Ohio Valley Conference (Region 2); Linda G. Herman, Illinois State University (Region 3).

■ Division II: Four members, including at least one ethnic minority and one woman. One from each of the four Council representation regions in Division II. Two former NCAA officers or former members of the Council. One Council member whose term does not expire in January 1995.

fund, the committee noted the wide disparity among the conferences in the amount of available money being distributed. The committee agreed to contact conferences that are spending less than 50 percent of the money allocated for the special-assistance fund and to review the topic at its 1995 meeting.

In another matter relating to the special-assistance fund, the committee agreed to allow, pending

Executive Committee approval, access to the fund by student-athletes who have exhausted their athletics eligibility or are no longer able to participate for medical reasons.

However, it chose not to permit the payment of health-insurance premiums as an acceptable use of the special-assistance fund. Many institutions offer student health insurance, and some had sought to purchase such insurance to cover student-athletes' nonathletics needs.

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw requirements are met: Charles A. Eberle, Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (Region 1); Wallace Jackson, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (Region 2); George W. Eastland, Saginaw Valley State University (Region 3).

Not eligible for reelection: Janet R. Kittell, California State University, Chico, chair (Region 4) (Council representative).

■ Division III: Four members, including at least one ethnic minority and one woman from each of the four Council representation regions in Division III and two former NCAA officers or former mem-

The committee decided that permitting such use could overwhelm the fund and diminish its purpose as a way to deal with emergencies. The committee also noted that medical expense is a permissible use of the special-assistance fund.

Conference realignments prompted a discussion of how distribution of the basketball fund should be applied, especially if a conference disbands.

The current policy clearly states bers of the Council. One must be an NCAA Council member. One Council member whose term does not expire in January 1995.

Eligible for reelection only if selected as one of the Council representatives: Dolores A. Bogard, State University College at Cortland (Region 2).

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw requirements are met: Curtis W. Tong, Pomona-Pitzer Colleges (Region 4).

Not eligible for reelection: Gregory L. Lockard, Montclair State College (Region 1); James E. Foels, Oberlin College (Region 3).

that if an institution moves from one conference to another, any basketball-fund units earned while a member of the original conference shall remain with that conference. To clarify the matter, the committee asked the staff to review the various meanings of "conference" for NCAA purposes since the term is defined in different ways depending on context (for example, from a membership perspective vs. automatic qualification for championships).

Bowling Green State University DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY invites nominations and applications for the position of Director of Intercollegiate Athletics that becomes available upon the retirement of the current director. The director reports to the university president and is responsible for the overall management and coordination of the university's intercollegiate athletics program, which currently includes 19 men's and women's NCAA Division I sports competing in the Mid-American Athletic Conference, as well as the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

The university maintains a very competitive and growing intercollegiate sports program. In 1991-92, and 1992-93, university teams won conference championships in a total of seven men's and women's sports, had two bowl appearances and twice won the Jacoby Cup for the outstanding women's program in the Mid-American Conference.

BGSU, a member of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, is one of Ohio's nine Ph.D.-granting public universities, with an enrollment on two campuses of 19,150. The main campus is residential, located in the city of Bowling Green about 20 miles south of Toledo, about 75 miles from Ann Arbor and Detroit, Michigan, and about a two-hour drive from both Cleveland and the state capital of Columbus.

In its Director of Athletics, the university seeks a dynamic leader and motivator with proven communications, marketing and budgeting abilities. The athletic director coordinates the activities of intercollegiate athletics with the educational programs of the university and assists in the creation of an environment that upholds, promotes and instills multicultural values in the campus and larger communities. Candidates must demonstrate dedication to the academic success of student-athletes, commitment to diversity and gender equity, and adherence to the highest ethical standards. Candidates should possess a bachelor's degree (master's preferred), and their previous professional experience should document success in progressively responsible positions in athletics administration. Consideration also may be given to candidates who have appropriate, related management skills and experiences.

The preferred starting date is July 1, 1994. Salary will be competitive and commensurate with qualifications. BGSU offers an excellent benefits package to its employees, including a first-rate state retirement program. Screening of applicant files will begin on April 4, 1994, and continue until the position is filled. To be guaranteed full consideration, completed applications should be received in Bowling Green by April 4. Send a letter of application, a resume and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of at least three references to: Mr. William J. Lloyd, Chair of the Search Committee, c/o President's Office, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403. 1994 Column No. 10

1994 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 89 Financial aid—Division I-AA football exception

Division I-AA institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 89 (effective August 1, 1994), Division I-AA football programs that do not provide athletically related financial aid to football student-athletes are exempt from the Division I-AA football initial-counter and overall-counter legislation.

During its January 12, 1994, meeting, the NCAA Council used the provisions of NCAA Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to:

1. Modify the provisions of Proposal No. 89 to make clear that those provisions shall not accrue to the disadvantage of multisport student-athletes, and

2. Revise editorially the provisions of Proposal No. 89 in a manner consistent with Federal regulations related to determination of financial need.

1994 Convention Proposal Nos. 112 and 113

Spring football practice—Divisions I-A and I-AA

1994 Convention Proposal No. 115

Spring football practice—Division II

Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 112 (effective immediately), it is permissible to conduct practice on Sundays during the 29 consecutive-day spring-practice period. Any such practice sessions must count as one of the 15 permissible postseason practice sessions.

Further, with the adoption of Proposal No. 113 (effective immediately), Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions have the discretion to determine the practice activities that may occur during noncontact sessions (e.g., use of blocking dummies), provided football gear or protective equipment other than head gear, shoulder pads, shoes, pants and porous, light-weight jerseys are worn by the involved student-athletes.

Division II institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 115 (effective immediately), the number of consecutive calendar days during which the 15 spring football practice sessions must be completed has been increased from 21 to 29. During its February 25, 1992, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that an institution has the discretion to determine the practice activities that may occur during noncontact sessions (e.g., blocking dummies), provided no football gear or protective equipment other than head gear, shoes, pants and porous, light-weight jerseys are worn by the involved players. Accordingly, it is not permissible for the involved student-athletes to wear shoulder pads during noncontact sessions.

1994 Convention Proposal No. 165 Contact with parents at site of competition

Member institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 165 (effective immediately), the restrictions on contacting a prospect's parent(s) prior to a contest on the day or days of competition have been eliminated. Accordingly, it is permissible for recruiting contact to be made with a prospect's parent(s) prior to an athletics competition in which the prospect is a participant during the day or days of competition, provided the contact occurs during a contact period and is considered a countable contact. This legislation was not intended to permit recruiting contacts with parents of prospects outside a contact period.

der about the seeding of participants, and why their favorite team is being shipped to some faraway region.

These armchair committee members arrive at their conclusions with a limited amount of information, most of which — it is probably safe to say — comes in the form of a top-25 poll or stories in local newspapers or sports magazines.

Thorough process

For the nine official members of the committee, however, identifying the 34 at-large teams for the tournament is a time-consuming and extraordinarily thorough process that seeks to ensure that all 301 Division I men's basketball teams are judged by the same standards.

The public is far less likely to have as much information as the committee has at its disposal when it holds its selection meetings.

"I think the public has to rely upon information that is supplied to them," said Tom Butters, athletics director at Duke University and chair of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee. "That information is with the polls, (Jeff) Sagarin (whose computer rankings appear in USA Today) or columns. They in no way complete the puzzle. The public tends to accept those rankings as being complete."

"There must be (something like) 20 different tests. The accumulation of the data begins to separate teams that, at the outset, look the same."

"The public normally just looks at the won-lost record of the team," said Ralph McFillen, commissioner of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference and a member of the committee. "They don't have access to all of that information (we have). They're dependent on the polls."

Battling perceptions

The committee has, because of perceptions that its selection proceedings were too subjective and secretive, taken steps to give the public a better understanding of the process—including making available the basic formula of the ratings percentage index. The index is a mathematical ranking of teams based on several components that the committee uses as one of many tools to help ensure that no teams are overlooked, Butters said.

"For a number of years, and this past year, we did something about that (public perception)," he said. "We did everything we could to indicate that there aren't nine men with green visors in a smoke-filled room."

Butters said that most members of the committee generally agree on nearly two dozen of the at-large teams for berths in the championship. Determining the last 10 or so is where it becomes difficult, he said.

"I think we all could agree on the first 20 to 25 at-large teams," Butters said. "It's the rest of those that separate us."

McFillen, who is in his second year on the committee, agreed with Butters.

"My one-year experience is that it is not too difficult to identify the majority of the at-large teams," he said. "The latter part of the field gets very difficult. It gets tougher down toward the end of the at-large teams."

Bubble bursting

Those last 10 or so teams usually are in third, fourth or perhaps fifth place in stronger conferences. They generally are not ranked in the top-25 national polls.

These "bubble" teams normally find themselves listed in the same vicinity in the RPI rankings, says Gary K. Johnson, NCAA assistant statistics coordinator.

"Teams ranked in the high 30s, 40s, low 50s..." Johnson said. "Those are your classic bubble teams."

Bubble teams can have their bubbles burst if a significant number of less-regarded teams win postseason tournaments in conferences with automatic bids. Those upsets drive up the number of high-quality teams that get into the tournament as at-large selections.

The RPI demonstrates how subtle the difference between bubble teams can be. For instance, in the preconference-tournament RPI, only .0004 of a rating point separated the No. 33 team from No. 34. The gaps are not always that narrow, but Johnson said it illustrates the committee's dilemma in distinguishing one team from another.

Everything examined

But because the selection process is as thorough as it is, Butters said he is never uncomfortable about the committee's decisions.

"My nightmare is that we've made our selections and that we've left someone out," Butters said. "Is there a possibility that we left someone out? It's a very thorough, comprehensive system and the likelihood of missing someone really is not possible."

McFillen said that with tools such as the RPI and other information that the committee is provided, little room is left for a team to be overlooked.

"This is a very detailed process," he said. "There aren't two or three people dominating the process. There's hardly a stone left unturned."

Women

Committee takes on more responsibilities now that the bracket has expanded to 64 teams games that will be played on campuses will not be confirmed until after the conclusion of first-round games — which means that some winners of first-round games may not know of their second-round destinations until less than 48 hours before they are to be there (although second-round games generally will be played at the site of the higher-seeded team).

Most noticeable change

Linda M. Bruno, associate commissioner of the Big East Conference and in her first year as chair of the committee, said the committee deliberations leading up to the unveiling of the tournament brackets March 13 in Overland Park, Kansas, will not be the most noticeable change from the past.

"The biggest difference we'll see is the logistics after everyone is selected," Bruno said.

"The challenge of getting 32 teams notified about where they are going (for second-round games) will be interesting," said Tricia Bork, NCAA group executive director for championships and event management. "We've prepared a pool of 32 people to help staff first- and second-round games. The upside is a lot more people are involved in helping to run their tournament. It's also brought a lot of new, young administrators to assist us."

More responsibilities

For the committee, expansion of the championship also has meant watching more games and ingesting larger pieces of information. It has involved following more closely the battles for second- and third-place finishes in conference races. It has — simply stated — meant more responsibilities.

Still, that is not as big a change as it might appear. Of the 16 additional entries, only eight are at-large selections, increasing to 32 the number of teams that the committee must select, in addition to the 32 teams that receive automatic qualification for winning conference berths.

What is different is the increased enthusiasm and excitement being generated for the women's basketball championship because of competitive conference postseason tournaments.

"It's been really exciting," Bruno said. "One of the things that has happened is we are looking at more conference races."

Generating excitement

"We don't have any hard data yet, so this is anecdotal, but there's just a greater excitement about a lot of conference championships," Bork said, "as evidenced by increased attendance. The explosion of women's basketball that we were hoping for as more institutions experience the tournament is happening."

The committee will enter a hotel room in Kansas City beginning March 10, flanked by a basketball season's worth of strength-of-schedule analyses, won-lost records, ratings percentage index reports, home/road performances, information about how key injuries may have affected certain teams and other factors.

"It's added more to the work I've done," said Jean Lenti Ponsetto, associate athletics director at DePaul University and a member of the committee. "It hasn't been burdensome at all. It's really been enjoyable. There's a real, renewed enthusiasm on the part of everyone."

"I've watched more games with the thought of watching more second- and third-place (conference) games. I've concentrated on more of those teams than I did last year. Last year I paid close attention to the top 70 teams or so. This year probably has meant another 50 teams. It's been more paperwork."

But mostly, it has meant more excitement.
